

Andrea Marcantoni got the PhD degree in Physiology in 2004. During 2004 AM moved in the laboratory of Cellular and Molecular Cardiology, Faculty of Pharmacy, Paris Sud, INSERM U-446, Chatenay Malabry, France (Prof. R.Fischmeister, Dr G. Vandecasteele). From 2005 to 2011 AM worked in the laboratory of Physiology at the Department of Neuroscience, University of Torino, Italy together with Prof. E. Carbone, V. Carabelli. In 2011 AM moved to the Institut de Pharmacologie Moléculaire et Cellulaire, UMR 6097 (CNRS), Sophia Antipolis, France (Dr. H. Marie). In 2012 AM obtained a research position at the University of Turin, Department of Drug Science and Technology (DSTF). Since 2018 AM is Associate Professor at the Department of Drug Science and Technology (University of Torino). Actually his main research topics concern the study of the role of neuronal ion channels in governing excitable and synaptic functions in physiological and pathological conditions.